(a) Contradictoriness is a derived term of a contradictory as noun. The difference between contradictoriness and contradictory is that contradictoriness is the state or quality of being contradictory while contradictory is any of a pair of propositions that cannot both be true or both be false. As an adjective contradictory is that contradicts something. Contradictory mutually opposed or inconsistent. So contradictory statements are statements that contradict something else.

⑥ In linguistics and lexicography, hyponymy is a term used to designate a particular member of a broader class. For instance, daisy and rose are hyponyms of flowers. Also called a subtype or a subordinate term. The adjective is hyponymic. The term is pronounced "HI-po-nim" (with the emphasis on the first syllable) and its etymology from the Greek "below" plus "words that are hyponyms of the same broader term that is a hypernym are called co-hyponyms." The semantic relationship between each each of the more specific words and the broader them is called hyponymy or inclusion. Hyponymy is not restricted to nouns.

For example, have several 'hyponymy',
Stair, gate, and so on.

© A deictic expression or deixis is a word or phrase that point to the time, place or situation in which a speaker is speaking. Deixis is expressed in English by way of personal pronouns, demonstratives, adverbs and tense. The term's etymology comes from the Greek meaning "pointing" or "showing" and it's pronounced "Dik-tik".

It sounds more complicated than it really is, for sure. For example, if you would ask a visiting exchange student, "Have you been in this country and you are the definite expressions, as they refer to the country where the conversation happens and the person being addressed in the conversation respectively."
